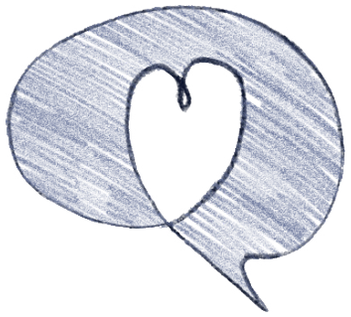
Identity and Colour
Misuse



The logo begins with a soft, rounded form inspired by the shape of the mind: fluid, organic and ever moving. But within it, at the very centre, emerges a heart: the emotional core of who we are.

The lowercase letters of “manas” reflect humility and warmth.
Its rounded, open letterforms fell human and not corporate. They quitely assure the user that this is a space to breathe, reflect and grow.

The logo’s construction is intentional and precise. The pictorial mark and wordmark are carefully scaled, spaced, and aligned to maintain consistency and legibility at all sizes. This structure must remain unchanged and should never be recreated.

The colour gradient moves from soft, airy blues into gentle purple tones that are associated with mental clarity, calmness and emotional wellbeing. The blue hues evoke a sense of peace, openness and trust: mirroring a mind at ease. The purples introduce a feeling of inner balance, reflection and healing.

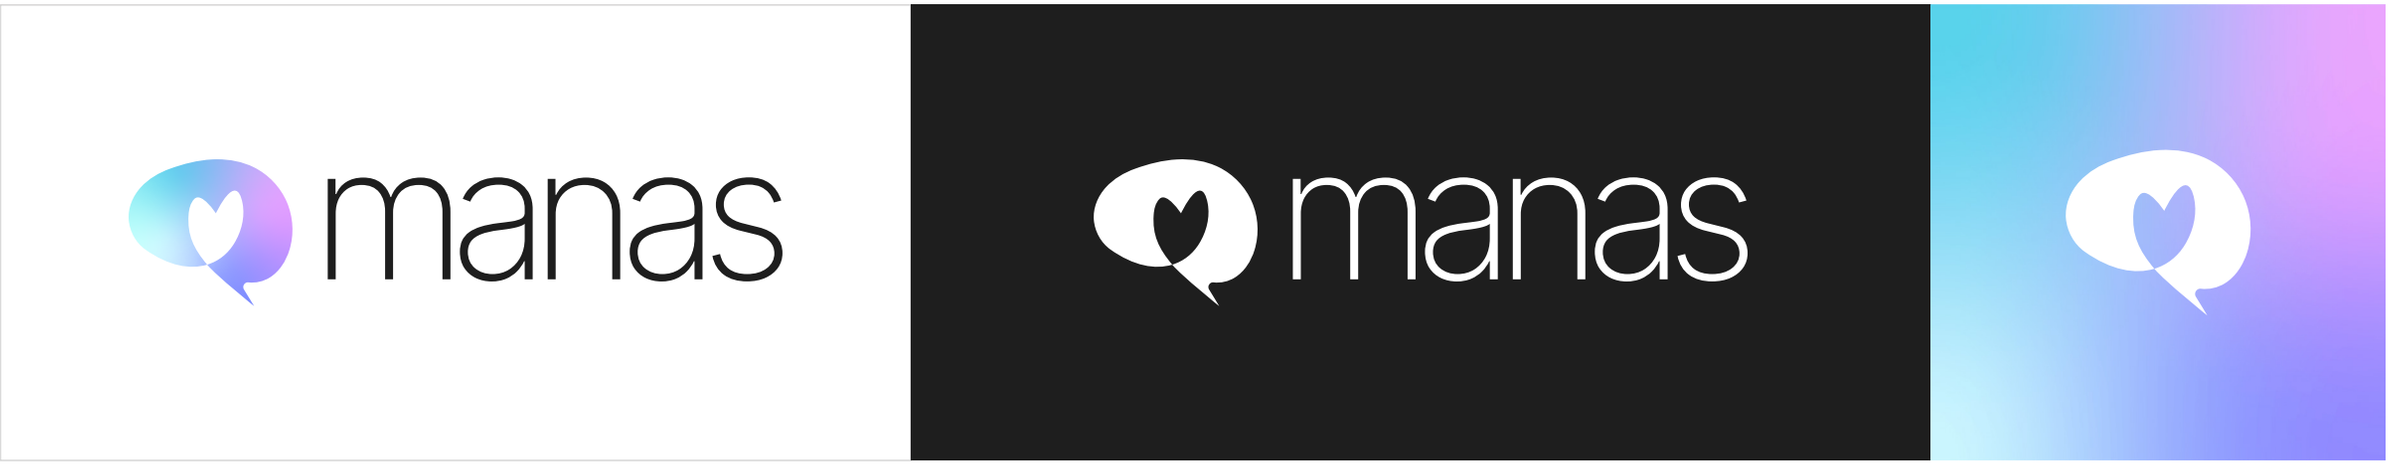
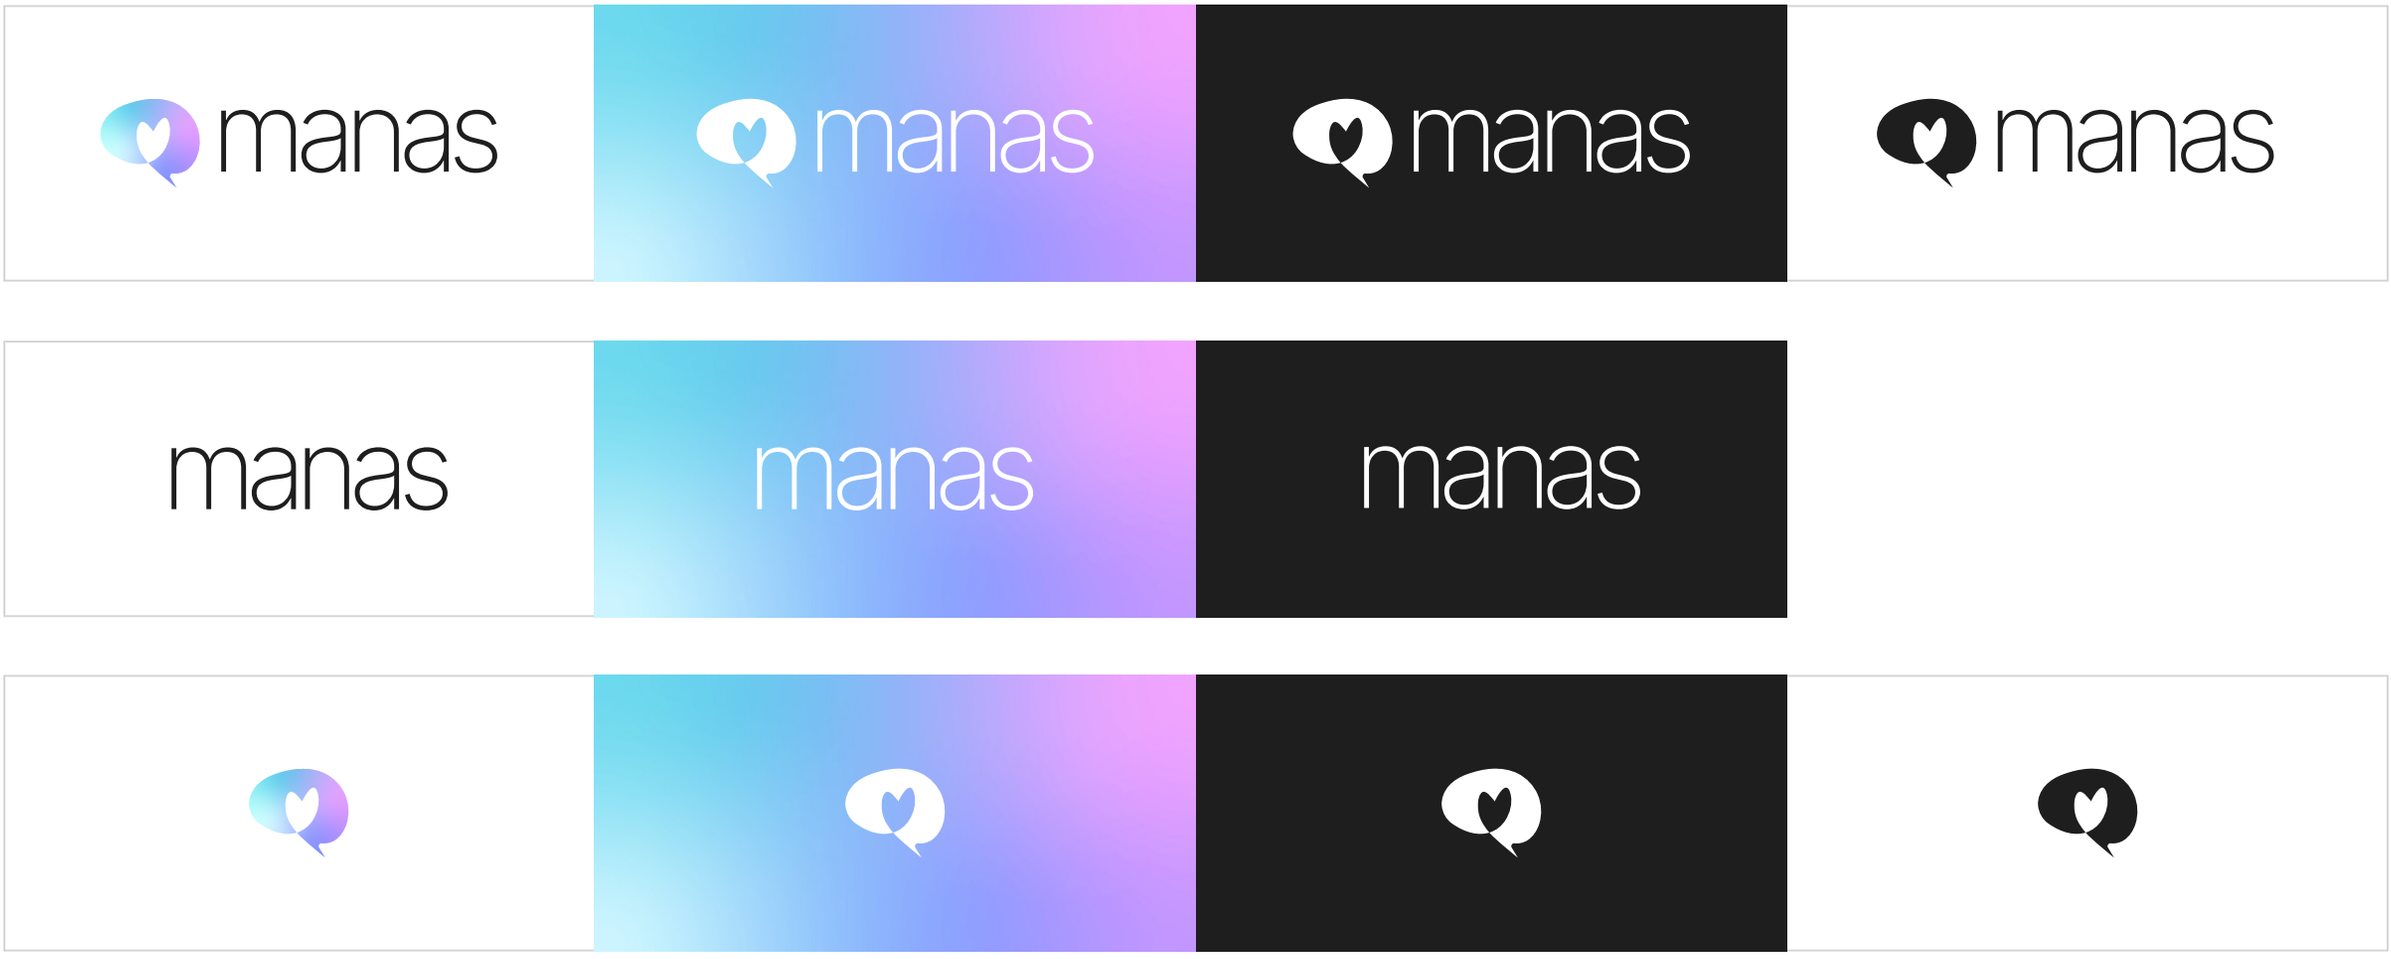
When there is available space, the primary logo should be used. If space is limited in smaller applications, the secondary logo (lettermark) or the pictorial mark should be used.



Always ensure there is enough contrast between the identity elements and background. On dark coloured backgrounds, use the logo primarily in light colours and on light coloured background use them primarly in dark.

The following are the most frequent colours for our identity:



To maintain the integrity, clarity, and recognizability of the Manas identity, the logo must always be used as intended. Any alteration to its form, proportions, colours, or alignment can weaken its meaning and impact. Here are the ways the logo is not intended to be used.

Do not alter the colours of the elements

Do not crop any part of the logo

Do not change the case of the letter mark

Do not rotate the logo at any angle

Do not stretch or squeeze the logo

Do not use the logo as an outline

Do not use the dark logo on a darker background

Do not use the light logo on a lighter background

Do not place any text too close to the logo

Core Palette

The gradient 'tranquil' is the primary expressive element of the visual identity and should be used thoughtfully to evoke calm and emotional depth. It is best applied in hero sections, key brand moments, backgrounds, and focal visuals where atmosphere and feeling are important.
The gradient should always feel spacious and uninterrupted, allowing the colours to flow naturally without sharp breaks.

Tranquil

The Manas gradient is broken down into four individual colours that form the core palette of the brand. While the gradient represents the fluid, evolving nature of the mind, these four colours act as its stable anchors being distinct yet deeply connected.

Each colour captures a specific emotional state within the journey toward mental wellbeing: clarity, calm, reflection, and care. Together, they allow the brand to express depth and warmth even in contexts where a gradient may not be suitable.

Type weight helps differentiate between different pieces of information, create contrast, and establish hierarchy. Use the following:

Use Inter Bold with –30 tracking

Inter Regular with –50 tracking

Body Text uses Inter Light with –50 tracking and 21 leading

The Manas icon system follows and intentionally organic and hand-drawn style, echoing the imperfect, human nature of the mind.
Gentle curves, and slightly uneven strokes, add a quality of warmth and calmness. Rather than feeling rigid or mechanical, the icons feel intuitive and calm, reinforcing the brand's focus on mental wellbeing and emotional safety.

Use the icons as solid fills. Icons must always appear in one consistent colour at a time.

Motifs for the background are derived from a single, continuous, flowy line similar gesture that draws the logo that represents the natural movement of the mind: fluid, non-linear, and always evolving.

Use as subtle background elements. The lines add quiet rhythm and depth without demanding attention. They are intentionally light and breathable, allowing content to remain the focus while gently reinforcing the brand's emotional language.
